*Redemption Grace Period Defined:

A thirty day period after a domain has expired and been deleted from our database; deletion occurs anywhere from 1 to 45 days after expiration. During the Redemption Grace Period, a domain is frozen in our database and cannot be accessed by any party, including us, for use, renewal, registration, or transfer. Furthermore, the web site and email attached to a domain name will not function during the "Redemption Grace Period." Once the thirty-day "Redemption Grace Period" has expired, the domain is once again available for registration and use (by any party), after a five-day registry hold. The Registrant can retrieve a domain name out of the Redemption Grace Period ONLY by paying a fee through us to the appropriate registry. We cannot guarantee the Restore request will be processed successfully if it arrives to us missing the supporting documents required by this form, or if requested with less than 2 business days left on the RGP.
